We believe that the government and all the state attorney generals should stop any further action against this great American company. Microsoft is too important a company for the economic health of the entire country the inordinate amount of time and money required to defend itself could have been better used for the development of even better products that benefit the national economy in general and the consumer and the stockholders in particular. Antitrust laws were not enacted to protect other companies let them compete in the free economic arena by offering products whose quality would make them acceptable to the consumer. If they lost in that arena it was because the consumer preferred Microsoft products not theirs! The USA DOJ should not come to the defense of any sore loser who comes to them crying uncle Sam!
